Scott Hayden

Specialist Practitioner of Social Media and Educational Technology at Basingstoke College of Technology

William is an innovative, altruistic, supportive, and passionate source of knowledge who helps me to experiment and move forward with new Educational Technology approaches. Through Twitter he shares new concepts/ articles/ papers (his own are exceptional) and has helped me to promote work virally and connect with fellow practitioners.

Caron Sandeman

Business Systems Development Manager at Dundee & Angus College

William is an enthusiastic individual with a passion for his work. I was first introduced to William through his Tech Story article which was informed and witty, he has an interesting and unique approach which I have found extremely informative and thought provoking.

Tom MacMaster

Head of ICT Services at Fife College

Carnegie College has been working with Solus, and in particular William, on the NHS Fife Social norms project. We have enjoyed working with Solus on this project, particularly in their use of technology to communicate messages. We have found them to be a company that understand the issues facing colleges in working on this kind of project and they have been very receptive in listening to our needs and suggestions

Dee Brecker

Director of Communications & Fundraising at Carers UK

"I came across William whilst he was involved with Youth Bytes. His latest project with SOLUS will benefit from his commitment to involving stakeholders to shape projects so that they meet the needs of the colleges, their partners and wider national programmes.

I am impressed with William's enthusiasm, commitment and dedication in providing tailored health and wellbeing services and information for students at FE colleges. His drive makes him an asset to any company."
